
Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Denise - 2010/02/13 09:12

Have you guys seen this stuff? I just got some to play with and it is way cool! FBB is a firm butter that whips up to double in size, nice and creamy. You can add oils, exfolients, color, fragrance... Lots of mad scientist fun! I like its potential for scrubs because it's not oily and it makes a boodle of lather. Is this the "next big thing"?
Denise:)

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Jan - 2010/02/17 21:38

I just ordered some up from WSP. It looks like really interesting stuff and I really like the fact that you can add a whole array of base oils to customize it.
I'll let you know how it turns out! I'm hoping it get it into our booth at our outdoor market.
Jan

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/03/07 06:49

so did you try it?. went to wps and looked at it, looks like a great product..read one review that says it has iodine in it and to watch for iodine allergies?? but it might be a fun product to scent, color or add exfoliants to.

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Denise - 2010/03/07 11:02

Puppy!!!! I am so happy to see you back here!! We have missed you so much!
I haven't gotten a review from my tester yet as to whether she liked the FBB or not. I got to thinking that it is so similar to cream soap. Probably could just make another batch of cream soap at a much more economical price and call it a day. I will say that it is very easy to work with, probably more so than cream soap. And it must contain SLSA because it foams like mad. At any rate it is fun to play with. The jury's still out... Denise

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Denise - 2010/03/07 11:02

Puppy!!!! I am so happy to see you back here!! We have missed you so much!
I haven't gotten a review from my tester yet as to whether she liked the FBB or not. I got to thinking that it is so similar to cream soap. Probably could just make another batch of cream soap at a much more economical price and call it a day. I will say that it is very easy to work with, probably more so than cream soap. And it must contain SLSA because it foams like mad. At any rate it is fun to play with. The jury's still out... Denise

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/03/07 16:14

hi Denise!!! it's has been awhile!! but hopefully i wont disappear any time soon. (got to build up my karma and posts again LOL) i'll have to search back to find posts on cream soap...what's that?

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Denise - 2010/03/07 17:59

Cream soap uses a combination of sodium hydroxide and potassium hydroxide, also stearic acid. It has a very white creamy consistency. It's a little different technique but it isn't hard to do. I only tried it once and it turned out very well but the recipe made so much that I never made it again, particularly because I couldn't think what to do with it. Denise

=====

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/03/07 18:28

did you buy the foaming bath butter from wsp or did you have a recipe. the only thing i didnt like about the base you can buy is it is full of chemicals but probably without them it wouldnt work?

=====

Re:Foaming Bath Butter

Posted by Denise - 2010/03/08 14:28

I bought it from Aquarius in B.C. I think ND has it as well. Yeah it has some stuff I'd rather leave out of my products, but mostly it's not too bad! Denise

=====