
what's really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/12 14:50

having to sort through all your oils, scents etc and toss them into the garbage

:(:(:(:(! so many have no expiration date but to be safe, going to toss alot of stuff.... but some supplier will be happy i guess:P

=====

Re:what's really bad about taking a break!

Posted by Deb1gms - 2010/11/14 05:31

HI!!

Alot of EO's will be fine for a very long time, specially if you have them in dark bottles in a cool place. Getting back to soap huh? I have been checking here often and it's dead... need to get some soapers resurrected. Am making some soap this week, but not sure what, maybe some Rosemary Mint.. Made some acne soap and unscented oatmeal a few weeks ago, but I use these in my business.

Good to finally have someone on the board..

Getting organized feels good.. have a great day.

Debbie-gms

Re:what's really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/14 06:35

hi debbiegms!! i thought i was going to restart back at the beginning of the year..forgot my user password here and resurrected as puppy2!!

yes, it seems my eo's and scents are fine, and additives are good, but butters and oils...tossed.

you have any thoughts on where we stand with the safe cosmetic act of 2010? that will totally mess up homemade products. and i cant find a definitive answer on whether soap will be in that or not..re fda soap is not a cosmetic..but the act is so broad it could be. if it goes through, i'm done

Post edited by: puppy2, at: 2010/11/14 06:46

Re:what's really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/14 06:41

<http://www.soapguild.org/blog/2010/07/from-the-president-safe-cosmetics-act-of-2010/>

<http://barsoapnatural.com/blog/tag/fda-cosmetic-regulation/>

and this kind of labelling will kill us

<http://www.soapguild.org/blog/2010/08/from-the-president-dc-advocacy-trip-follow-up-safe-cosmetics-act/#comments>

the most impossible thing is ANY variation in a recipe, ie scent, oil used, etc and you cant do it..all recipes have to be registered..so that special request cant be done.

they havent determined the lab testing for safety criteria yet, but no way can you test each batch of 12 soap bars and be cost effective.

Re:what's really bad about taking a break!

Posted by Diane57 - 2010/11/16 08:42

They sure don't make it easy for small business do they? Sure takes the fun out of it.
How long can you keep your oils and butters if they are in the fridge?
Nice to see you guys around, its been so quiet here.

Re:what\'s really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/19 14:52

i dont really know diane! that's why i was wishing they had expiration dates on them, but i threw most away as they were over a year old. i would think the fridge would make them last a bit longer.

as a side note..thinking about maybe doing some candles... can you use the same fragrance oils??

Post edited by: puppy2, at: 2010/11/19 14:53

Post edited by: puppy2, at: 2010/11/19 15:50

Re:what\'s really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/19 14:54

thesoapguild posted an opinion on where the safe cosmetic act stands now that the mid term elections are over so maybe we are ok!

<http://tinyurl.com/39f66w6>

Re:what\'s really bad about taking a break!

Posted by Deb1gms - 2010/11/23 15:41

Nice to hear from you all again. I make most of my money on skin care creams etc. Would hate to not be able to do that. Am pretty sure in Feb. I will be opening a place next door to my sister's Salon, and do facials and body wraps. I will be able to use all my things there at least.

Hugs, Debbie

Re:what\'s really bad about taking a break!

Posted by puppy2 - 2010/11/27 07:47

good luck with your new venture deb1!! sounds exciting!

Post edited by: puppy2, at: 2010/11/27 07:48

Re:what\'s really bad about taking a break!

Posted by HenleyNatural - 2011/01/11 13:36

Here is an Safe Cosmetic Act of 2010 update from Handcrafted Soapmakers Guild.